If you make use of multiple clipboard entries from time to time, you might find it useful to keep track of them all. That's why MetaClip comes out of the box ready to help you with this. MetaClip has been designed to allow you to save all kind of clipboard entries. First, you need to pick a category for each of your entries. This might be done by picking a default name or, you could assign a name to your categories. Once done, pick an item in the database and simply press Ctrl+C to copy it back to the clipboard or Ctrl+X to delete it. MetaClip is available for both Windows 7 and Windows 8, so it can be run on any supported system. MetaClip provides a command line interface so you can use it with automation tools like Sysinternal's AutoIt. These are not the only tools that can be used with MetaClip. There are more clipboard managers like MultiClipboard, ClipIt, and Concierge. A while ago I have been using ClipIt a lot as it allows for fine control over URL and text entries. You may want to have a quick look at these tools. However, please note that we do not offer any official endorsement of any of the apps listed. (1) (2) (3) (4) (5) (6) (7)

What's New In MetaClip?

MetaClip, which stands for Multiple Clipboard, is a small software application for Windows XP, Windows Vista and Windows 7 that enables you to save multiple clipboard items. It can store both text and multimedia items, such as URLs, photos, formatted text records, and others, in one or more categories that you can easily assign a custom name to. In this way, you can quickly identify any type of saved clipboard item. MetaClip can be deployed on all Windows versions out there. It has an elegant and intuitive interface that allows you to quickly perform essential actions. Configure common parameters such as text preview, selection hotkeys, category hotkeys, save new items to the clipboard, assign a custom name to each saved item, decide between exporting to a file or directly switching among categories, manage your saved items, and much more. The program is free to use. However, it does not come without limitations. Only limited support has been provided. From the Developer: MetaClip is a small software application whose purpose is to help you store and make use of multiple clipboard entries. It has been designed to work well and to suit all Windows platforms. It features a minimalist user interface. The program has only a few configurations options. You can always read the help manual that comes with the software. Save multiple clipboard entries MetaClip gives you the possibility to organize clipboard records into user-defined categories. Plus, you can assign custom names to each category so you can quickly differentiate between them.

In order to save a new clipboard entry in the database, you need to specify a user-defined name and pick a category. Other important options worth being mentioned enable you to quickly copy items back to the clipboard with ease, delete saved clipboard entries in case you no longer need them, export data to a file on your computer, and switch between different categories with ease thanks to a drop-down list. Tests have pointed out that MetaClip carries out tasks quickly. It is quite friendly with system resources so the overall performance of the computer is not affected. Final observations To sum things up, MetaClip comes bundled with nothing more than basic features for helping you save multiple clipboard records. On the downside, there's no support for advanced options so you cannot preview text content and images, perform searches to quickly identify an item in the list, assign hotkeys for faster actions, automatically monitor and save clipboard data, and play sound notifications when a new item is
