An understanding of what an audience wants and, more importantly, what you want to do for your audience will enable you to create works that stand the test of time. You can achieve your artistic goals with Photoshop, but they will be easier, quicker, and more effective if you have a clear idea of what you want to do in the first place. So before you put all of your energy into the project, make sure you have a realistic plan of what you want to achieve. * Sketch a rough idea of what you want to do. Do some research beforehand to find out what's popular with your target audience. You can usually find this out by looking at websites that target your audience. Consider how your work will be published. Will it be in a book? A magazine? How will you create it? Will you use a photo booth? Will your audience get copies of the image when they buy the item? Will they be able to download it later, or will it be embedded in a website? These questions can help guide your approach to creating the image. # Exercises

Q: Cannot reference static variable inside class I have a class that uses a static variable. The problem is, my button inside class doesn't show up unless I make the static variable non-static. I'm just trying to make it work with a static variable so I can display a form with some data from the class. Here's my code: public partial class MainWindow : Window { public MainWindow() { InitializeComponent(); } public void runProgram() { //runs some stuff and turns a static boolean to true // This is what I need to change. Form_Results frmResults = new Form_Results(); frmResults.Show(); // This calls the method that runs the stuff, but the Form_Results // form is not visible, even though frmResults.Show() is above. OtherClass.otherClassDataStuff(p); } } I just need to figure out why the button is not visible. Thanks for any help. A: When you declare frmResults this way Form_Results frmResults = new Form_Results(); you are declaring a new Form_Results, and calling its Show() method. Nothing more. Instead, you have to call Show() on the frmResults instance that was created by OtherClass.otherClassDataStuff(p) this way OtherClass.otherClassDataStuff(p).Show(); $\sigma_{ij}^2|\text{beyond}(i,j)$
